MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I.

Defendant's Motion in Limine here attempts to limit Experts John Smith, P.E., (biomechanical expert) and Don Stevens (Accident Reconstruction Expert) from postulating what, in fact, may have come in contact with the release lever through their own investigation and case analysis. First, Plaintiffs correct the standard applied in the motion that Nevada experts need only opine in a reasonable probability, not the certainty standard (see p. 17, line 6 Defendant's opposition.) Nevada applies the "reasonable degree ofprobability" standard set forth in Morsicato v. Sav-On Drug Stores, Inc., 121 Nev. 153, 155, 111 P.3d 1112, 1114 (2005). Nevada's experts need only have the same expert opinions for the "more probable, than not standard," which coincides to our burden of proof: preponderance of the evidence.

II.

Second, Plaintiffs concede that neither expert can say with any scientific basis what, in fact, did hit the lever; however, it would be manifestly unjust to limit what the experts may say is in the range of possibilities as it is not speculative as to what items were found in the backseat, especially Mr. John Smith, P.E. who has already stated that the items that could have done such damage are finite. Plaintiff is confident Mr. Stevens will not be offering any testimony on potential flying items in the vehicle cabin as his duties were to reconstruct the accident and the motions of the vehicle including the number of vehicle rolls. Nonetheless, Plaintiff argues that the defense suggestion that experts are "speculating" is wrong. Instead they are offering a finite range of possibilities to help the assistor of fact conclude. This appears to be a re-hash of the Ninth circuit appeal on this Court's Motion for Summary Judgment that subjected this case to an evaluation of Mr. Hoffman's (Plaintiff's car seat expert) on his passenger seat-back theory, which opined the seat back being slightly declined could have hit the release lever, or as Mr. Smith suggests a diaper bag, or any

1 flying object could have activated a release of the carrier hooks from the base. What hit the release
2 lever is not important, and Plaintiffs experts will not testify they know what hit it, but likely defer to 3 Dr. Hoffman on this issue. The ninth circuit Court of Appeals addressed this: Hoffman 4 acknowledged the car seat could be the cause of the impact with the lever, but did not have 5 empirical evidence to prove it. The Court of Appeals reversed this Court's decision on the basis
6 that Dr. Hoffman's causation theory was grounded in evidence to support his theory. And, it is 7 prejudicial to apply that same reasoning to Smith's biomechanical analysis as his opinions deal with 8 the direction of forces to bodies and objects within the vehicle.

10 III.

11 It is important to note that both Stevens and Smith have deferred car seat mal-function 12 opinions to the assigned expert, Mr. Hoffman, as to what caused the failure although it is 13 undisputed that the car seat carrier was detached from its base by virtue of the rollover event, and 14 something had to hit the release lever given the loading marks on the carrier hooks, and the fact 15 they did not break. Defendant's motion in limine is entitled "cause of detachment." Limiting 16 opinions on the "Cause of detachment" is a general and vague attempt to silence Plaintiffs experts 17 on what could have hit the release lever. The jury is entitled to know what may have caused the 18 release lever to actuate; those options include: 1.) Centrifugal actuation -on its own by virtue of the 19 2006 Evenflo corporate decision to lessen the tension on the tension spring release lever, and/or by 20 virtue of the rollover forces upon said tension spring and lever, or 2.) by virtue of the front 21 passenger seat back, and 3.) by virtue of a flying object. John Smith, PE should be allowed to

1 testify as to #3) what could have caused the actuation by virtue of what was studied within the 2 vehicle and such testimony is not speculative. Thus, Defendant's motion should be denied.
